Also, there seems "to be structural restrictions on binding of anaphors by their antecedents " ,(A. Radford ,1997:74) as illustrated by the following sentences:

(14)

(i) The president can congratulate himself.

(ii) * *Supporters of the president can congratulate himself

In (i) , himself "must be bound by a third person masculine singular antecedent like the president." (A. Radford ,1997:75) Sentence (i) has the following structure:

(15)

On the other hand, sentence (ii) has the following structure:
(16)
